A TRIBUTE TO MOTHERS

Charles R. Rose

“My son... do not forsake the law of your mother. Bind them continually upon your heart; tie them around your neck. When you roam, they will lead you; when you sleep, they will keep you; when you awake, they will speak with you” (Proverbs 6:20-22).

To most children, no matter their age, their mother’s words are magic. Through their spell, the drab event may become an interesting tale; the commonplace may take on a new meaning. Through the chosen words of our mothers, we may gather their thoughts and feelings and thereby enrich our own. This little poem by Anna Hemstead Branch is a tribute to a mother who, through her singing words, helped her children to enjoy and understand the world in which they lived.

My mother has the prettiest tricks
Of words and words and words.
Her talk comes out as smooth and sleek
As breasts of singing birds.

She shapes her speech all silver fine
Because she loves it so.
And her own eyes begin to shine
To hear her stories grow.

And if she goes to make a call
Or out to take a walk,
We leave our work when she returns
And run to hear her talk.

We had not dreamed these things were so
Of sorrow and of mirth.
Her speech is as a thousand eyes
Through which we see the earth.

God wove a web of loveliness,
Of clouds and stars and birds,
But made not anything at all
So beautiful as words.

They shine around our simple earth
With golden shadowings,
And every common thing they touch
Is exquisite with wings.

There's nothing poor and nothing small
But is made fair with them.

They are the hands of living faith
That touch the garment's hem.

They are as fair as bloom of air,
They shine like any star,
And I am rich who learned from her
How beautiful they are.
